you're late. it's wonderful to see you, gandalf! you know bilbo. he's got the whole piece in an uproar. half the shire's been invited. and the rest of them are turning up anyway. to tell you the truth, bilbo's been a bit odd lateiy. i mean, more than usual. he's taken to locking himself in his study. he spends hours and hours poring over old maps when he thinks i'm not looking. he's up to something. all right, then. keep your secrets. but i know you have something to do with it. before you came along, we bagginses were very well thought of. never had any adventures or did anything unexpected. whatever you did, you've been officially labeled a disturber of the peace. gandalf? i'm glad you're back. go on, sam. ask rosie for a dance. oh, no, you don't. go on! bilbo? bilbo, have you been at the gaffer's home brew? bilbo. bilbo, watch out for the dragon! speech! bilbo! bilbo! he's gone, hasn't he? he talked for so long about leaving i didn't think he'd really do it. gandalf? where are you going? what things? you've only just arrived. i don't understand. and proud of it. cheers, gaffer. don't worry, sam. rosie knows an idiot when she sees one. good night, sam. what are you doing? nothing. there's nothing. wait. there are markings. it's some form of elvish. i can't read it. mordor! bilbo found it. in gollum's cave. but he was destroyed. sauron was destroyed. all right. we put it away. we keep it hidden. we never speak of it again. no one knows it's here, do they? do they, gandalf? shire. baggins. but that would lead them here! take it, gandalf! take it! you must take it! i'm giving it
